Euclid, the ultimate Geometric typeface

Based on elementary shapes and constructed of monolinear lines, the Geometric typeface is associated with modernism and eternalness alike. Designers love the genre for its rigor and purity. With Euclid, Swiss Typefaces has the best Geometric typeface ever. Named after the Greek mathematician, Euclid is a precision tool for branding agencies and design studios. The typeface comprises five collections, providing a palette of fine-tuned typographic voices within the canon of the Geometric. Each of the five flavors offers a special expression which can be just the right solution for the visual identity you are working on.

Euclid Circular A is for avant-gardists. Round counters ('a', 'd', 'p') and horizontal terminals ('C', 'e') make for perfect, self-contained shapes. The undogmatic Euclid Circular B combines the immaculate counters of Euclid Circular A with the diagonally cut curves of Euclid Square, offering the best of both worlds. The forthright Euclid Square is distinguished by angular terminals ('S', 'c') and square dots in punctuation marks. In letters like 'b', 'q', the stem intersects the circle. Euclid Triangle's key feature is its openness, induced by vertically cut curves ('G', 'e'). Like Flex, it has pointed terminals ('A', 'M') and ascenders ('f', 'k') that align with the capitals. Finally, Euclid Flex is for rebels and players. It has the most daring details ('t', 'i', '&') and comes with Cyrillics, italics, and an Ultralight. Its sheer inexhaustible supply of wild alternates and ligatures make it a flexible instrument for playful and powerful brand design.

File Formats

Available desktop font formats: OpenType/CFF (.otf extension), TrueType (.ttf extension on request)

We offer WebS, WebM and WebXL webfont files subsets – you will find them all in your package:

- WebS is a reduced and lighter font file suitable for most common web usages, containing only the Latin alphabet (without alternates, ligatures and OpenType features).
- WebM (Euclid Flex only) is the WebS subset + Cyrillic alphabet (without alternates, ligatures and OpenType features).
- WebXL is the complete font file containing all characters and languages (Latin, Cyrillic (Euclid Flex only)), including the many available only with OpenType functions and therefore not fully supported by all web browsers.

Available webfonts formats: .woff2, .woff, .eot, .ttf, .svg

The webfonts are manually optimized for ClearType rasterizers and above (DirectWrite), using TrueType hinting in vertical directions.

Available formats for App, EPUB, Broadcasting OpenType/CFF (.OTF extension)

Alphabets (all alphabets are contained into the font files)

I'm only allowed to use my two eyes to see the world. They don't know that I imagine other life beings' exist and live them in my head. Polyrhythm. I go up with them as if there were a camera attached to its crown, but

Euclid Flex Bold, 12pt

I follow the board through the bushes with my spirit, man. I swim with the salmon; inner vision: I see graffiti and I run with the writers. I follow their trail and I recreate their tags with invisible how they trekked across the open plain of the city. I see their wild scribbling and I know they were pursued by police and they were smoking that shit and drinking that whoa. I smell their urine on the wall and recognize the overturned garbage can with the trash strewn all over the sidewalk as they work; bravo young writers, bravo. I find empty spray-cans that match the color of the tag. I pick up the cans and smell them. These beasts were here not six hours ago. The tags make an abrupt stop

Euclid Flex Regular, 8pt

This morning the city woke up to a blizzard of Ja tags. People were shoving their cars out of Ja tags and cleaning their sidewalks so that no old kid tripped over the Ja tags. There were children outside playing in them to catch them on their tongue or use them as weapons and hurl them at each other, playfully. There were no seats drenched in Ja tags. Trucks were standstill because the sheer weight of the JA fillins and tags and thro could not be supported by their frames. All stores were selling were Ja based on the advertisements which read only JA JA JA. The city shut schools for the day and the MTA went on a holiday schedule as they tried to clean their trains of all the Ja tags. But they couldn't so the trains were

Euclid Flex UltraLight, 8pt

Sanitation was called on to work 24 hour shifts to get a handle on these. They are everywhere. A couple of deaths are blamed on the Ja tags. Old people stuck in their homes die of carbon monoxide and cars crash because they can't handle the Ja tags. JA JA. The police are called on to help out. They do nothing but sit in their cars talking on their cell phones. I got things to do, but today we don't get to. We just got to ride out this Ja wave. It's everywhere hasn't been the first time. The city has been dealing with this for decades. All the kids he inspired have been bombing this city for deep. It's a war zone. Ja tags are turning brown and slushy. Kids everywhere don't have school. They are following Ja's lead. If he can climb up there I bet I can climb up even

Euclid Flex Light, 7pt

I'm saying it loud here: in Graffiti, there is no race class or nationalist distinction unless you project it. When a tag is written all over the city, no one can be sure whether the person who wrote that tag is black, male, female, rich, poor, American or any prepackaged prescribed identity. One can stay anonymous for as long as they want writing their tags on the wall and have relationships

Of course, once a graffiti writer writes something more than his or her tag and brings race into the discussion (adding a Queer to their tag, or painting a Puerto Rican flag inside their work) then if one so desires, one can infer from the color of skin belonging to the writer or whether the writer has a vagina, but a tag has no race, no gender

Writing on walls and objects is a magical land where we can communicate without the baggage of social constructs if we wish. WoWO is where we can express a different kind of honesty. Ja is an intimacy that cuts across binary divisions. Therefore, Ja's tag cannot be more meaningful to you nor can it have a relationship with your father the way you wish you had or the way you could

This morning the city woke up to a blizzard of Ja tags. People were tripped over the Ja tags and cleaning their sidewalks so that no one could see their cars. There were children outside playing in the snow trying to catch them on their tongue or use them as weapons and I saw them at each other, playfully. There were no seats drenched in Ja tags. Trucks were at a standstill because the sheer weight of the JA fillir tags and throwups could not be supported by their frames. All stores selling were Ja tags based on the advertisements which read only Ja. The city shut down the schools for the day and the MTA went on a 15 minute schedule as they tried to clean their trains of all the Ja tags. But the

I'm saying it loud here: in Graffiti, there is no race or class or nationalist distinction unless you project it. When a tag is written all over the city, no one can be sure whether the person who wrote that tag is black, male, female, rich, poor, American or any prepackaged prescribed identity. One can stay anonymous for as long as they wish writing their tags on the wall and have relationships

Of course, once a graffiti writer writes something other than his or her tag and brings race into the discussion (adding a Queer to their tag, or painting a Puerto Rican flag inside their work) then if one so desires, one can infer from the color of skin belonging to the writer or whether the writer has a vagina, but a tag has no race, no gender

Writing on walls and objects is a magical land where we can communicate without the baggage of social constructs if we wish. WoWO is where we can exist as a different kind of honesty. Ja is an intimacy that questions binary divisions. Therefore, Ja's tag can be more wealthy than you nor can it have a relationship with its father the way you wish you had or the way you
